

*To extend the activity – and relate it to the Science domain, you can use other playdough colors to create an entire solar system of planets!

What better way to learn about geography than creating the Earth out of playdough! To do this activity, you will need green and blue playdough. This can be store bought, or you can make your own (go to the “Science” page for instructions on how to make Scented Playdough; just use green and blue kool aid packets or food coloring).
